HOW INDIANS CATCH WILD FOWL.—A number of persons from the city and Gold Hill are at present in the mountains hunting and angling. Wild duck are found in some localities in abundance, and the trout in the streams take the hook readily. Wild fowl have not yet made their appearance in the market in any quantity, as most of those shot are kept by the sportsmen for their own use. As the season advances the Indians will take the field and capture them in great numbers.

They make large swinging nets out of strong cords, which they manufacture from the roots of fibrous plants. The bark is stripped off and manipulated, and twisted by the squaws into two, which is wound into balls ready for use. It is then woven into nets, some of which are forty feet in length, the interstices being about two inches square. These nets are swung between two trees in some convenient position on the shores of the lake or pond. Early on a cold frosty morning some of the Indians secrete themselves in a neighboring thicket, while others get in a boat and forming a semicircle, advance slowly toward a flock of ducks, driving them toward the mouth of the bayou. They swim slowly off, hesitating to take flight, being, perhaps, partially benumbed by cold. The circle narrows, and when the wild fowls are in front of the nets the Indians in the boats raise a great outcry and throwing sticks and stones, scare the flock, which, arising from the water, flies in an opposite direction directly into the net in the meshes of which they become entangled by their heads and feet.

The Indians on shore spring from their hiding places, tear down the net and envelope the ducks in it. They are joined by their companions from the water, and the work of slaughter commences. The necks of the birds are broken as soon as seized, and they are thrown together in piles. In this manner several hundred ducks are sometimes taken at a single haul, but the Indians have enough for their own use and an ample supply for the market. —Virginia (Nevada) Chronicle.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE.—A young man living in Randolph county, New Jersey, became enamored with the daughter of a neighboring farmer, she being under fifteen years of age, and his love was reciprocated. The man was about to start for an adjoining county, saying he would wait for her five years if necessary. The girl could not bear the thought of separation, and at length agreed to elope. The pair walked seven miles through the pines and said to his father's house, and early the next morning were taken to the railway station, and thence to Philadelphia, where they were married by an alderman, the girl declaring her age to be eighteen. They returned to the house of the groom's sister, at Haddenfield, where they were confronted by the father of the bride and officers. The groom was arrested and committed to jail on the charge of abduction. Subsequently he was indicted by the grand jury, and on Wednesday last he was arraigned for trial. The court-room was packed by an audience whose sympathies were centered upon the couple.

The girl, like a true heroine, assumed her share of the blame, admitted her affection for her husband and her willingness to quit her father's house, and asserted her belief in the honor of her husband. G. S. Cannon, formerly attorney-general, delivered an eloquent defence, but Judge Woodhull charged that the law had been violated, and that the jury must not be influenced by appeals to their sympathy. The jury was out all night, returning five times for instructions, and at length rendered a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation for mercy. On the rendering of the verdict the prisoner was seized with convulsions, which continuing, sentence was deferred until the December term. Much sympathy is entertained for the defendant, who is esteemed an honorable, upright man. —N. Y. Sun.

A SNAKE AROUND HER CHIGNON.—Yesterday on the train on the Erie railway which runs from Rochester to Danville, and reaches here at 10 a. m., a most singular circumstance occurred. When the train was about three miles from this village, the passengers in one of the coaches were alarmed by the singular appearance of a lady who gave her name as Mary P. Rhoades, of Adrian, Michigan, and a relative of Rev. C. T. Selbit, of Olean, N. Y. She was leaning over a seat uttering, the most piercing cries. A gentleman rushed to her and asked the trouble. She made no answer, but continued to scream the louder. When the train reached this village she was helped into the waiting room, and a gentleman present procured a glass of brandy, which being given to the lady she appeared to recover some. A lady standing near at this juncture gave a scream, and pointing to the head of Miss Rhoades, exclaimed, "How it came there was a mystery, and only explained by the theory that it had got into the car, and took refuge under the cushions of the car seat. Miss Rhoades started she felt something crawling up her head, and could only give vent to her feelings in screams, and until it was taken off did not herself know what the matter was. The snake was killed, and the affair produced no little excitement for the time. —Syracuse Standard's Genesee Letter.

ECONOMY AND INDUSTRY.—We find in one of our exchanges an interesting resume of the observations of a German correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, who writes from Paris. He seems to have employed his time in investigating the causes of the recuperative power exhibited by the French people since their disastrous war. The world has been astonished at the large revenues of the government and the ease with which they have been collected, and, most of all, by the prompt payment of the immense indemnity to Prussia. The writer attributes this wonderful recuperative energy to the universal economy practiced in French families. They economize in dress, in wine, in equipages, and in all the details of domestic management. They even carry their economy (a difficult thing for the French to do) into the clubs, restaurants and theatres, and, indeed, into all their pleasures. But this is not all: they have thrown a new energy into agriculture and all industrial operations.

The people of the Southern States may learn a profitable lesson from all this. The sooner they learn to practice a rigid economy and to work at their pursuits with redoubled energy, the sooner they will again get upon the high road to prosperity. —Rich. Whig.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

Nearly all diseases originate from Indigestion and Torpidity of the Liver, and relief is always anxiously sought after. If the Liver is regulated in its action, health is almost invariably secured. Want of action in the Liver causes Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Pain in the Stomach, Cough, Chills, Urticaria, Stomach Stomach, bilious attacks, palpitation of the heart, depression of spirits, or the blues, and a hundred other symptoms, for which SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR is the best remedy that has ever been discovered. Its action is mild, effectual, and being a simple vegetable compound, can do no injury in any quantity that it may be taken.
